Looking backward, 2000-1887 Edward Bellamy
Historical Section, Shaanmut Collkue, Boston, December 28th, 2000. Living as we do in the closing year of the twentieth century, enjoying the blessings of a social order at once so simple and logical that it seems but the triumph of common sense (it is no doubt difficult for those whose studies have not been largely historical) to realize that the present organization of society is, in its completeness, less than a century old. No historical fact is, however, better established than that till nearly the end of the nineteenth century it was the general belief that the ancient industrial system, with all its shocking social consequences, was destined to last, with possibly a little patching, to the end of time. How strange and well nigh incredible does it seem that so prodigious a moral and material transformation, as has taken place since then, could have been accomplished in so brief an interval! The readiness with which men accustom themselves, as matters of course, to improvements in their condition, which when anticipated seemed to leave nothing more to be desired, could not be more strikingly illustrated.
