Guerrilla Tactics Against Passive Aggression in the Work Place (The Complete Guide To Passive Aggression Book 6) Neil Warner
Passive-aggressive coworkers are the most frustrating and obnoxious people in any workplace. The worst case of passive-aggressive behavior involves destructive attitudes such as negativity, sullenness, resentment, procrastination, “forgetting” to do assigned tasks, chronic lateness, and intentional inefficiency.

When it involves promising to do tasks others rely on — purposefully not getting them done and offering lame excuses later, and describing their behavior as non intentional – it’s exasperating for the manager. Time, energy, effort, opportunity, and sometimes money is lost.

This creates a paranoid team or work group environment — workers need to be always on the look out for “backstabbing behavior,” so they can defend themselves and preserve the quality of their own work.
